This book is different than other conservative books about the mainstream media in that its main focus is not raising awareness of what the left is doing to propagandize mainstream news and entertainment. It is about what conservatives can do to turn the situation around.

The book makes it clear that the left's dominance in mainstream news and entertainment needs to come to an end or risk of losing our country to leftist Democrats. The author compares conservatives to a sports team that doesn't have all their positions on the field of battle covered and are going up against a leftist team that have all their positions covered. And because of this, the Democrats can be as bad as they are and still get elected. But luckily for conservatives, this book shows what conservative can do to fill in their missing links and take the mainstream media advantage away from the left and soundly defeat them in the mainstream arena and at the ballot box.

Ginny Bass Johnson is an author who wrote "The Missing Links to Making Conservative Principles and Judeo Christian Values the Mainstream of America" to show how God loving conservatives can defeat the left's control over our mainstream and rescue our country and culture from the influences of the left. She is also the author of two children's books.
